by all and any means the amount of land to be declared forfeit. Again, in the parish of Carrick, Edward Bermingham, who held close on 1600 plantation acres, was returned as an ' Irish papist,' and therefore liable to forfeiture by the commissioners, in spite of the fact that the jurors had returned him as a protestant, the reason for their so doing ' were . . . that hee came before them and swore hee was a protestant.' It is to be deprecated that an anachronism such as ' the modern counties of King's and Queen's ' should appear in this volume. S.P.

Irish Historical Studies. Vol. VIII, No. 29 (March 1952.)

This number contains an article on ' O'Connell and the Irish press, 1800-42 ' by Brian Inglis, and one by K. Buckley on ' The records of the Irish land commission as a source of historical evidence.' The tenth in the series of select documents is by J. G. Simms, ' The original draft of the civil articles of Limerick, 1691.' Miss Margaret Griffith will earn the thanks of many students for her informative ' Short guide to the Public Record Office of Ireland,' and J. L. J. Hughes's list of ' The chief secretaries in Ireland, 1566-1921 ' is an equally valuable contribution. The remainder of this number is taken up with an account of the research on Irish history in Irish universities during the academic year 1951-2, the thirteenth annual report of the Irish Committee of Historical Sciences, and reviews and short notices.
