The Galweys of Munster*

By SIR HENRY BLACKALL

GALLWEY OF KILLARNEY

The Galweys held lands in Kerry as early as the fifteenth century, but we do not know when this branch first settled in the county. A Confirmation of Arms granted to Lt-Gen. Sir Thomas Gallwey (14 Sept. 1900) traces his ancestry to Richard Gallwey of Killarney, living in 1734, but no further.

In 1612 Richard fz William Burke had a grant of Garryish island, Co. Kerry, described as the property of John Gallwey and certain others. John Gallwey of Killarney is shown as Titulado in the Census of 1659. On 5 Aug. 1681 Sir Valentine Browne demised to Stephen Gallwey premises in the town of Killarney whereon said Stephen had built a house. One of the lives in the lease was 'Christopher, son of Michael Gallwey' and one of the witnesses Thomas Gallwey. A lease of 24 Sept. 1703 from John Askill to Elinor Nagle of Ross, widow, mentions her son Francis Gallwey and also James Gallwey who, with his brother Edward, is included in a list of Lord Kenmare's tenants in Killarney in 1709. Andrew Gallwey's holdings in Killarney are referred to in an affidavit by John Shugrue dated 12 Nov. 1737. Darby Falvey of Faha, Co. Kerry (d. 1711) married Gobnett Galway.³⁸³

Richard Gallwey of Killarney, aforesaid, assigned certain premises to his son Christopher on 4 Oct. 1734.³⁸⁴ His will was proved 1747. He had issue :

GALWEY OF MALLOW

A pedigree of this family in the Office of Arms, Dublin, deduces their descent from Michael Galwey of Rockspring who died 1784, but further research enables us to carry it back to

James Galwey of Cork, m. 1673 (M.L.B. Cork & Ross)³⁹⁸ Elizabeth, dau. of Anthony Woodley of Leades, Co. Cork, (see Burke's L.G.I., 1958 ed.) and had issue a son,

GALLWAY als. GALWAN OF YOUGHAL

The choice of a generic appellation for this family was somewhat perplexing owing to the diversity of its orthography and the frequent use of 'n' as the final letter of the name. This caused it to bear a close resemblance to that of O'Gealbháin anglice Galvin, a Thomond sept whose habitation was Clare and Kerry, though the name is not unknown in Youghal. There were however very few native families among the urban oligarchies in Munster, who were almost wholly composed of Old English until the Cromwellian conquest, when they were displaced by the new Protestant ascendancy. It seems safe therefore to assume that the Gallivans and Galwans connected with the Corporation of Youghal were Galweys, not Galvins, particularly as we find instances of the same individual being described both as Gallway and Gallivan.⁴¹³

I have been unable to discover any pedigree of the Galweys of Youghal in the Office of Arms or elsewhere, although they were prominent in that town over a long period.

Francis Galaway was mayor of Youghal 1562.⁴¹⁴

James Gallovan was Bailiff in 1580, when he was deputed by the mayor to confer with the Earl of Desmond who had called upon the Corporation to deliver up the town to him. When this was refused the place was sacked by the rebels, and in 1583 James, as agent for the Corporation, petitioned the Privy Council for relief on the ground of the sufferings of the townsmen because of their loyalty. In the same capacity he obtained exemplification of the town charters of 2 Edw. IV. and I. Eliz. from the Queen. He served as mayor 1602-04.⁴¹⁵

Alderman Nicholas Gallway (probably his son) was among the jurors summoned before the Star Chamber in 1603 and heavily fined for having acquitted William Meade, Recorder of Cork, on a charge of high treason.⁴¹⁶ He was mayor in 1606 for three weeks, when John Galwan took over for the remainder of the year.⁴¹⁷ On 14 Sept. 1610 he was elected mayor for the ensuing year, and on 25 Sept. received from the retiring mayor '8 charters old and new, the Sword and Hat of Maintenance, 3 Sergeants Maces and the Common Mayoralty and Cockett seals.'⁴¹⁸ He was appointed Mayor of the Staple 17 May 1617. He was a landowner⁴¹⁹ and 'undertaker of the wine,' engaging in the continental wine trade,⁴²⁰ from which he amassed considerable wealth, judging from his tax assessments under Inchiquin's levies for the upkeep of the royalist army in 1642-3.⁴²¹ He is shown as a forfeiting proprietor in the Liberties of Youghal⁴²² 1641, but was decreed Innocent under the Commonwealth and was himself a purchaser of forfeited lands.⁴²³ He made his will 10 Oct. 1653⁴²⁴ and left issue :

1. James, of whom presently.
 2. Patrick, who was decreed Innocent by the Court of Claims, 27 June 1662, and allowed 135 acres.⁴²⁵
 3. John, who is mentioned in his father's will.
1. Mary, m. James Ronayne of D'Loughtane, Co. Waterford, sometime mayor of Youghal.⁴²⁶

The eldest son.

James Galwan, Alderman, Bailiff (1635) and Mayor of Youghal (1641) m. Joan (who was decreed Innocent) dau. of James Ronayne (supra) by whom he had issue a son, Patrick Gallwan 'gent' who, together with Walter Gallway, 'merchant' was appointed Alderman of Youghal 18 Apr. 1688 under James II's Letter to the Lord-Lieutenant. As a Jacobite he was outlawed 1691 for Treason committed in Ireland (as also was 'James Galvan, gent, Burgess').⁴²⁷ He is mentioned in the will of John Pyne of Youghal, 1689.

Reverting to Alderman Walter, we read in the State Papers that Walter Gallwey of Youghal, merchant, purchased in 1682 a Dutch vessel that had been adjudged lawful prize by the Court of Admiralty in Ireland, but was subsequently ordered to be restored to the original owner under Art. 21 of the Treaty with the States-General. Upon a petition by Gallwey that he had incurred a loss of £3,300, the good natured King (Charles II) considered it reasonable that he should be compensated, and made him a grant of Crown lands to the annual value of £330.⁴²⁸ It need not surprise us therefore to find Walter Galway among those outlawed as Jacobites in 1691, but as there were two of the name who suffered for their loyalty to the House of Stuart the question arises which (if either) may be identified as Aldn. Walter, and this is not free from difficulty.

Walter Galway of Letterliky, Co. Cork, gent. whom D'Alton identifies as Capt. Walter Galway, an officer in Lord Kilmallock's Regt., was outlawed for treason committed in Ireland, and forfeited 1,418 acres in West Carbery comprising 5 plowlands in Letterliky and 2 in Agogoheen. These lands had formerly belonged to the See of Cork, but 'the King's title being concealed and quit rent paid' were recovered from Bishop Synge by 'Walter Galway of Youghal' in 1699. They were sold at Chichester House to Hugh Hutchinson in 1703.⁴²⁹ On 10 May 1705 Capt. Arthur Gallwey of Ballynatray, Co. Waterford, made his will, of which he appointed his niece Isabella Gallwey an executrix. She was dau. of Walter Gallwey of Cork by Isabella, dau. of Sir Percy Smyth of Ballynatray and was bapt. at Youghal on 20 March 1681.⁴³⁰

The other forfeiting owner of the name was Walter Gallwey of Whitestown, Co. Waterford, who was outlawed for treason 'committed beyond the seas' and forfeited 282 acres in that county.⁴³¹

On the whole, the weight of evidence seems to be in favour of Aldn. Walter being the same person as Capt. Walter of Letterliky.

On 18 July 1729 on the application of James Ronayne and Patrick and James Gallway, the mayor and Council of Youghal relieved 'all merchants inhabiting the town' of certain customs and duties paid by foreign merchants. It would seem from this that Catholics had previously been treated as aliens for this purpose.⁴³²

GALLWEY OF THE LEEWARD ISLANDS

Gallweys figured among the West Indian plantocracy from the seventeenth century, with estates in Antigua, St Christopher and other islands. It would appear from family records that they were of Cork origin.

David Gallwey of Montserrat was member of Council (M.C.) of that island and Judge, J.P. and Major, Leewards Militia.⁴³³ He was signatory to a petition from the planters of Montserrat to the Governor of Barbados, Jan. 1668-69, asking for protection against, not only the Indians, but also 'the bands of savage, rebellious Irish who had attacked and robbed the settlers and damaged their stock.'⁴³⁴ In a letter to the Lords of Trade and Plantations 13 July 1680 he signs himself 'Da. Gallwey.' By his will, d. 16 Dec. 1734, he left his estate to his nephew, David Gallwey, and among other bequests left

John Gallwey of Montserrat, who was committed in custody by the Council of Montserrat, 25 Oct. 1699, until he found security, for having declared that the English were rebels for dethroning King James.⁴³⁶ He had issue :

(2) John Willett Payne, Rear-Admiral, R.N. d. unm.

(3) Sir William Payne-Gallwey, 1st Bt. who by private Act of Parliament, 1814, likewise took the name and arms of Gallwey.⁴⁴¹ He was ancestor of Sir Philip Payne-Gallwey, 6th (and present) Bt.

The following are items concerning members of the family whose relationship to the foregoing I have been unable to establish.

John Gallwey of St. Christopher, merchant and shipowner, had his sloop 'Tryal' captured by a Spanish privateer and condemned at Porto Rico. He estimated his loss at £655-1-6 (including 'a negro man and his apparel—£150') and submitted a memorial to the Board for Trade & Plantations on 12 March 1728/29 praying that H.M. be moved to obtain satisfaction from the Court of Spain.⁴⁴² Later in the same year another vessel of his, having put into Guadeloupe by leave of the French Lieut-Governor, was seized by the Customs, whereupon the Governor of St. Christopher

(Lord Londonderry) protested to the Governor of Martinique, and in July 1729 forwarded a letter from Gallwey to the Duke of Newcastle, describing him as 'a young gentleman of a family of some consequence in these parts.'⁴⁴³

In June 1749 a private Act was passed at St. Christopher confirming a family settlement made by Mrs. Anne Galway, widow.⁴⁴⁴

Christian Gallwey, widow, by her will (Sept. 1779) liberated her slave William and her 'negro woman.'⁴⁴⁵

Eleanor Dasent, 'now wife of Mr Galway of Trinidad,' had a legacy under the will of John Lynch 14 Aug. 1807. She was dau. of John Dasent, Chief Justice of Nevis, by Eleanor, dau. of James Roche of Martinique, who was seventh in descent from Philip Roche of Rahan, Kings Co., 6th son of David, Viscount Fermoy, temp. Edw. IV.⁴⁴⁶

To ring down the curtain, when slavery was abolished throughout the British possessions by the Emancipation Act 1833, John W. Gallwey of Antigua was among the slave-owners of the island to whom compensation was awarded.⁴⁴⁷

GALWEY OF LOTA—POSTSCRIPT

When canvassing the question how far back the Lota pedigree of 1763 could be relied on, I expressed the view that John 'Mór' Galwey might reasonably be identified as John Galwey fz Walter shown in the Book of Survey & Distributions as owner of Lotamore in 1641, for I knew from family records that both Lotamore and Lotabeg formed part of the Lota estate in the eighteenth century.⁴⁴⁸ Recent discoveries by Mr. K. W. Nicholls of documents salvaged from the destruction of the P.R.O.I. in 1922 have however thrown fresh light on the subject.⁴⁴⁹

By a deed of 12 Feb. 1668, Patrick Roche mortgaged to 'Edward Gallwey of Lootaghbeg' the lands of Doondanone, and in a subsequent deed (unexecuted) 'Edward Gallwey fz William alias Gallwey' released to said Roche all his right, title and interest in the castle and lands of Dondaignon. Another such discovery was of an Inquisition taken 7 Nov. 1584 which found that William Gallwey of Cork died seised of 'a castle near the Black Rock called Dondahenon.' It would appear from the foregoing that Edward Galwey of Lota, (who purchased the freehold of Lotabeg in 1673) was not a son of John 'Mór,' but of William Galwey, Sheriff of Cork 1617,⁴⁵⁰ and that the Galweys of Lota represent the senior line. It also confirms the statement in Historical account of the family of Galwey, that Dundanion Castle was their ancient family seat. In the Book of Survey & Distributions, Edward Galwey fz William is Historians and genealogists have cause to be grateful to him for this invaluable contribution towards filling the void left by the tragic destruction of P.R.O.I.

shown twice and Edmond only once, and in the Civil Survey, (Cork City) 1654, Edward Galwey is shown as owner of 11 denominations and Edmond of only one. It is suggested then that Edmond was Edward's younger brother, or alternatively that the name 'Edmond' was entered in error for 'Edward.'⁴⁵¹

The information disclosed by the material thus made available does not involve the rejection of the descent of John Galwey fz Walter from Andrew fz Edward, as shown in the chart pedigree (Sheet 2), or affect the relationship of the Carrick branch to the Lota line.⁴⁵²
